Jap Premier Fears Allied Landing In Nippon

HIROHITO SEES TROUBLE IN WAY YANKS ADVANCE

Emperor, However, Happy Over Way Troops Fight "Bravely, Strenuously"

URGES ALL-OUT DEFENSE

Koiso Advises People Of Fierce Drives Against Sons Of "Heaven"

NEW YORK, Sept. 7—Emperor Hirohito personally appeared today before the 85th extraordinary session of the Japanese diet to sound a grave note that "increasingly fierce" Allied counter offensive has produced "a more intense" war situation for Japan.

Hirohito read an imperial rescript before the diet, and Premier Gen. Kuniaki Koiso rose to warn the Japanese people not to overlook possibility of an Allied landing in Nippon.

Text of Hirohito's rescript was broadcast by Radio Tokyo and recorded by the FCC.

Hirohito said, "we deeply rejoice" over the way Japanese soldiers are fighting "bravely and strenuously" and the fact that relations between Japan and the occupied countries are "growing stronger."

Fierce Attacks

"However, the counter-offensive of the enemy is becoming increasingly fierce and the war situation is truly becoming more intense. Truly, today is the time for imperial Japan to decide victory by massing her total strength," the emperor asserted.

In his first speech to the diet since he took over the reins of government from Gen. Hideki Tojo last July, Koiso told the legislators that Japan was "in the midst of a grave situation on which depends the rise or fall of the empire." He underscored these words by asserting that "the life or death of the Yamata race is at stake."

Set For Offensive

Koiso was quoted by the Tokyo radio as saying that "this is the transition period for Japan to turn from the defensive to the offensive."

The broadcast, recorded by the FCC, said Koiso had told the diet that "ways and means for this move are taking form."

Koiso told the diet he was continuing the Tojo policy of integrating "all military and civilian functions" and coordinating "command and state affairs" to conduct the war on a totalitarian basis.

"This," he said, "is the reason for the establishment of the supreme council for the direction of the war."

Koiso stressed the necessity of increasing plane production and

Collaborationists In Belgium Imprisoned In Stockade With Germans

NAMUR, BELGIUM, Sept. 6—(Delayed)—All day long, Belgians wearing the red, yellow and black armband of the Belgian Forces of the Interior have been marching "bad Belgians" at gunpoint to the prisoner of war stockade where the Germans are kept.

It seems the Belgians are anxious to interne all collaborationists and incidentally beat them up a bit in partial payment for their treacherous crimes.

An American military police guard is posted over the prisoners once they arrive, but not much can be done to prevent them from being banged up as the Belgians bring them in.

This afternoon, for instance, one collaborationist was surrounded by a crowd of about 25 persons as he was brought in to the prisoners' stockade.

Rough Treatment

As he approached the cage, the crowd mashed a German helmet on his head and somebody snapped an uppercut to his chin at the same time. This was stopped immediately by the Americans, but the collaborationist had sustained a certain amount of damage.

One prisoner thrown in with the Germans was a collaborationist agent of Filipino descent who had been working in close cooperation with the Gestapo in Namur and, according to stories circulated in the town, had garroted several victims.

Also stolidly marching at rifle point was a youth of about 15 wearing German military boots, while three others of about the same age drove him along.

NOW serving a seven-year prison sentence imposed in England in 1940 for Nazi activity, Tyler Kent, above, a clerk in the U. S. embassy in London, has been officially charged by the U. S. Kent was convicted with an alleged pro-Nazi accomplice for having delivered secret information to Nazis.

GEORGE BILL HITS DEADLOCK

Impasse May Force Measure Back Into House For Final Decision

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7—Senate and house conferees appeared deadlocked today over a major issue in the George postwar reconversion and demobilization bill, an impasse which may force the measure back to the house for a final decision.

Following completion of the third day of conferences, Sen. Walsh (D) Mass., acting chairman of the conference committee, said a "serious difference of opinion" had arisen over a senate provision extending federal unemployment compensation to approximately three million government employes.

Senate conferees indicated they would ask their colleagues to return to the house for further instructions and a possible roll call on the controversial question. The senate provision was stricken from the bill by the house ways and means committee and attempts to reinsert it from the floor were barred on a point of order, the chair ruling it was not germane to the bill. No vote was ever taken.

Measures Provide School Fund, Ease Balloting By Soldiers

RECORD BREAKING SPEED

Senate Gives Unanimous Approval Without Debate In Five Minutes

BULLETIN

COLUMBUS, Sept. 7—Governor Bricker today signed into law bills to provide $8,860,000 to increase salaries of Ohio school teachers and suspend for the coming election only the statutory provisions that election ballots be marked in black pencil only.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 7—Bills providing an additional $8,860,000 in state funds to provide pay increases for school teachers, and to permit this year's election ballots to be marked with any type of writing instrument, were placed on Govenor Bricker's desk today as the work of the speediest, smoothest legislative session in Ohio's recent history.

In record breaking action, both the house and senate completed unanimous passage of both measures within 20 hours after the second special session of the 95th general assembly was called to order Tuesday night. Less than five hours later, the bills were signed and the legistatures adjourned si ne die.

No Opposition

There was not a murmur of opposition to either of the administration-sponsored measures in the senate, and only a flurry of excitement in the lower chamber when the authority of Speaker William Daddens (R-Hamilton) was challenged during an attempt to amend the Sheppard-Evans bill, which suspends for this year only the statutory provision that all ballot markings must be with black lead pencil.

One amendment offered by Rep.

PLAIN DEALER CHANGES SIDES, BACKS DEWEY

CLEVELAND, Sept. 7—The influential and normally Independent-Democratic Cleveland Plain Dealer today announced its support of Thomas E. Dewey for president. It was the second time in the 103-year history of the newspaper that it has fully indorsed a Republican candidate for that office.

In a one and a half column editorial, the newspaper opened its declaration for Dewey with the statement: "Because it is no use to win the war and lose America that we love, the Plain Dealer supports Thomas E. Dewey for the presidency," and charged in the succeeding paragraph, "give us four more years of Roosevelt and we shall have a totalitarian socialist country."

The editorial principally attacked President Roosevelt for his tax program, which, the paper contended, "has been largely a device for penalizing successful enterprise, for redistributing wealth and for promoting social and economic revolution."

The paper declared that those who listened to Dewey's acceptance speech "must feel convinced, as we do, that Thomas E. Dewey is devoted to the principles on which this nation was founded and that he has a will to start the nation anew on the road of its sacred purpose."

PUC TO REVEAL WATER SURVEY DECISION LATER

Ohio Public Utilities Commission took under advisement the request of the city of Circleville for a survey and evaluation of the Ohio Water Service company plant here at its meeting Thursday.

Commission members said a report on their decision will be announced at a later date.

City officials have requested the commission to make the survey and evaluation as one of the steps taken in action to acquire the property from the company.

HUNT FOR KILLER

COLUMBUS, Sept. 7—Columbus police searched today for the assailant of Mrs. Jennie H. Moyer, 45, (402 W. Third ave.) who was found dead in bed. Coroner Gravis said the woman died as a result of a beating.

PATTON'S DRIVE HAS TWO GOALS FOR DAUGHTER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7—Gen. George S. Patton's sensational march toward Berlin carries a double pronged personal meaning today for his daughter, Mrs. John Knight Waters.

Not only does Patton's action vindicate "Old Blood and Guts" who was raked over the fire because of the slapping incident, but to Mrs. Waters it also means her general father may be the one to free her husband.

Col. Waters of the tank corps, was captured at the Kasserine pass in North Africa and is now a prisoner in Germany.

Mrs. Waters said she hears from her father regularly once a week. He asks about his two small grandsons, acknowledges a package and sometimes says "I am planning a little trip."

Patton's daughter said she was invariably amused at words the general uses. Uppermost in her mind right now is his statement, "all you have to do to lick the Huns is to drive them up one hill and kick them down another all the way to Berlin."

DOG VETERANS OF WAR MAY BE LICENSE FREE

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 7—An ordinance providing for lifetime free license for dog veterans of the war was being drawn up for adoption by the Los Angeles city council today.

The council instructed the city attorney to prepare the ordinance after Councilman Harold Harby, pointing out that many of the war dogs had returned home wounded, suggested that free licenses were "the least we can do" for the four-legged heroes.

BULGARIA GOES TO WAR ON HUNS

Former Ally Of Hitler Now On Side Of Russia And United Nations

LONDON, Sept. 7—Berlin today announced a declaration of war by Bulgaria against Nazi Germany.

German news agencies broadcast an official announcement by a Wilhelmstrasse spokesman that the former Axis ally had gone over to the side of Soviet Russia and the United Nations.

Previously, the Bulgarian news agency and Germany's propaganda outlet DNB had disclosed a break in diplomatic relations between Sofia and Berlin.

Exchange Telegraph reported from Ankara that the United States, Great Britain and Russia had been notified officially of Bulgaria's entry into the war against Germany.

Bulgaria had previously asked Russia for an armistice but had not received a formal reply from the Soviet Union. Russia declared war on Bulgaria when she became dissatisfied with the policy of neutrality enunciated by Premier Konstantin Muraviev.

Advices from Ankara said that Bulgaria finally decided to declare war on the Reich when German troops tried to disarm Bulgarian occupation forces withdrawing from Yugoslavia.

Earlier, Bulgarian broadcasts asserted that remaining German troops in the little Balkan kingdom had been disarmed and interned.

FORTUNE GOES TO WOMAN FOR CARE OF PEKES

MINEOLA, L. I., Sept. 7—Provided she will be caretaker for 15 Pekinese dogs, Mrs. Ita Mae McGuire of Napanee, Ont., today may have life interest in a $100,000 trust fund.

The strange bequest was revealed when the will of Marguerite Shaw, a friend of Mrs. McGuire, was filed for probate. Attorneys said that Mrs. Shaw's will would give Mrs. McGuire at least $200 a month from the interest on the principal of the trust provided she makes a home for the a[illegible] four dogs.

PORT OF EMDEN RUINED AS HUN SHIP REFUGE

LONDON, Sept. 7—The German North sea port of Emden, just across the East Ems gulf from Holland, and the nearest point to which the Nazis might hope to evacuate their naval vessels based in French channel ports, was a smoking ruin today.

Huge four-motored Halifax and Lancaster bombers of the Royal Air Force, escorted by fighter planes, carried out a heavy attack against Emden Wednesday evening.

Emden has been severely blasted by the RAF on many other occasions, but the Nazis apparently have been able to keep most of its dock facilities usable. Terrific explosions shook the dock area last night and towering columns of smoke billowed high into the air.

Other forces of Lancasters blasted the French channel port of Le Havre with 1,680 tons of bombs following another refusal by the German garrison to surrender. Troop concentrations, gun positions, pillooxes and ammunition dumps were well plastered with explosives.

NEW TRIUMPHS IN AIR SCORED AGAINST JAPS

GEN. MACARTHUR'S HQ., NEW GUINEA, Sept. 7—New Allied triumphs were on record today in the sky-borne destruction being hurled against Japanese forces from the Netherlands Indies to the Phillipines, where sinking of three additional enemy freighters was reported.

Night patrol bombers, continued to neutralize Sasa airdrome near Japan's main Philippine Island base at Davao, according to Gen. MacArthur's communique.

Other bombers struck out at Geram island in the Netherlands East Indies, pounding Boela airdrome again while fighters scoured the Geram coast for small Japanese shipping craft.

Enemy bivouacs and defense areas in the Tenimber islands in the Banda sea, south of Geram, were strafed by fighters. Large fires were started.

Utarom, Jefman and Semate airdromes on Dutch New Guinea's Vogelkop peninsula also were attacked by light bombers, fighters and patrol planes, that expended 38 tons of bombs and caused numerous fuel fires and sank at least four barges.

LONDON ROBOT BATTLE AT END

Only 2,300 Of 8,000 Bombs Reach Capital—Yanks Win British Praise

LONDON, Sept. 7 — Except for possibly a "last few parting shots," the battle of London is over, with the robot bomb menace finally ended after widespread death and destruction, an official announcement disclosed today.

On the heels of the cheering word that commencing September 17, Britain's dismal, dreary, accident-provoking blackout restrictions will be lifted, a government spokesman dissipated some of the secrecy that surrounded the results of Nazi Germany's desperate flying bomb attacks.

Ninety percent of all the fatalities caused by these missiles in the last two months occurred in the London area itself. Recent authoritative estimates have placed the killed and injured at 10,000.

Duncan Sandys, chairman of the committee coordinating the work of robot bomb counter-measures, reported officially on the situation.

Sandys disclosed that more than 8,000 flying bombs had been launched against England, but that only 2,300 of them reached the London region.

Twenty-five percent of the bombs launched by the enemy were inaccurate and many of them dived into the sea. During the first week of the attacks, 33 percent of them were brought down and about the same proportion reached London.

Toward the end of the heavy attacks, 75 percent were brought

Fate Of 250,000 Germans In Balance As Russ Sweep Over Romania

BULLETIN

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Sept. 7 — Front-line broadcasts today reported the long-awaited junction between troops of the Allied Third and Seventh Armies at an undisclosed point close to the German border and all signs pointed to imminent full-scale frontal assault against the Siegfried line.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7—Secretary of War Stimson disclosed today that American invasion casualties in the first three weeks after D-day were 50 percent lower than previous estimates.

At his weekly news conference the secretary said that the high command estimated that the original landings and bitter early fighting on the beaches would cost approximately 81,000 dead, wounded and missing.

"The actual losses were 42,000, of which 33,933 were battle casualties," Stimson said. "This was about 50 percent of original estimates.

Overall Army casualties up to August 21 were estimated by Stimson at 305,795, including 57,677 killed, 156,933 wounded, 45,967 missing and 45,218 prisoners.

By International News Service

German resistance stiffened today all along the western front.

Allied forces moved steadily ahead, however, and consolidated for what may be the decisive battle of the European war—an all-out smash at the Siegfried line.

American columns crossed the Meuse river at Auchamps. Spearheaded by Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's armored forces, these troops this morning are driving through the Ardennes forest toward Germany and Luxembourg.

Unconfirmed reports from the interior of France indicated that the northern force and the army advancing from the south are less than 25 miles from each other and soon will be joined.

Morale Not Broken

Enemy defenses grew as the Allied armies swung into position for the march against Germany, in the Nancy-Metz area, resistance was particularly strong, according to spokesmen at supreme Allied headquarters, who warned that the morale of the Germans, while not high, shows no sign of collapse."

The headquarters spokesmen said, in addition:

"The Germans are putting up considerable resistance in several areas, and there are still plenty of Germans, including fanatical

John J. Buckley (D-Mahoning) would have counted all ballots which reached the precinct ballot boxes on election day, even if the absentee voter in the armed forces were to be killed in action after he mailed in his vote. The amendment was tabled, 61 to 49.

Amendment Fails

Rep. Chester K. Gillespie (R-Cuyahoga) then attempted to introduce a somewhat similar amendment, and appealed to the house membership when Deddens held that the subject matter was not within the governor's call. The members, however, upheld their speaker.

The house then passed both the bill and the emergency clause making it immediately effective by identical 114-0 votes. Earlier it had approved, 113-0, the Daniels-Paskell school aid bill and its emergency clause.

The latter bill, which provides $8,085,000 for increases to the state's 38,000 teachers, $500,000 for school property rehiabilitation, and $275,000 to reimburse school districts which borrowed funds in 1942 to pay back salaries, passed without debate, although Rep. A. Lee Fair (D-Holmes) termed it a "belated attempt" to do the right thing."

"It would not be necessary to take this action had not the Bricker administration removed the earmarking of sales taxes for school purposes," he said. "However, the minority is glad to join in this belated attempt to provide teachers with wage increases."

Senate Fast

The senate functioned more smoothly than the house, even taking a short-cut by amending the names of the sponsors of identical measures in the house. This enabled the house, when substituting the senate-approved bills for the house measures, to adopt them without making title amendments which would have required the bills to return to the senate for concurrence.

The senate, working less than five minutes, passed both bills and their emergency clauses without debate by 32-0 votes, and after only sketchy explanations by their sponsors.

There was not a single amendment to either of the measures, as far as actual text matters was concerned, from the time they were introduced until they were placed on the governor's desk today.

RAIL LABOR SHORTAGE AT CRISIS IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Sept 7—A shortage of railroad labor was reported to have reached the stage of a crisis in Chicago today because of the return to classes this week of more than 3,000 high school pupils who held various railroad jobs this summer.

The possibility of calling on soldiers and sailors to help tide the rail lines over the crisis was said to be under consideration as freight piles mounted in the large terminals.

Also reported under discussion was the placing of embargoes on freight shipments.

Walsh said the house conferees agreed, however, to restore to the bill a provision for a federal retraining and re-employment administrator, a post filled now by Veterans Administrator Frank T. Hines under a presidential order. The agency would have otherwise expired with enactment of the bill. Walsh said the present administrator would be given no additional authority, but merely be empowered to coordinate the activities of governmental agencies and prevent overlapping.

House conferees rejected a senate provision extending federal aid to stranded war workers to enable them to reach their former homes or new employment and turned thumbs down also on a compromise proposal to limit such assistance to "hardship cases."

Walsh indicated that agreement may be reached on eliminating a house amendment for a 2½ percent interest charge on federal loans to public agencies for post-war public works planning.

A fourth major point still in dispute, said Walsh, is senate insistence that the authority of the new director of war mobilization and reconversion be strengthened with the power to issue directives to government war agencies. The house deleted such a senate provision, contending he was already vested with such authority under existing laws.

Walsh indicated the work of the conferees might be speeded up with the possible return Friday to the discussions of Sen. George (D) Ga., conference committee chairman, who suffered a broken collarbone.

Members indicated they were still hopeful of an agreement and enactment of the measure by next week in time for a September 15 recess until after the November election.

HUN TROOPS NO LONGER STRUTTING AS IN PAST

ZURICH, Sept. 7—Contrast in the German army's appearance in France today with the proud, strutting Nazis of a few weeks ago was drawn today by a traveller from Strasbourg.

"German troops arriving from the front are in a condition unimaginable in the German army only a few weeks ago," he said.

The unidentified traveller described the fleeing Nazis as, "indescribably dirty, weary, hungry, beaten to a standstill, without officers, in straggling groups with their heavy materiel long since abandoned."

Eisenhower Vague

Gen. Eisenhower's communique remained discreetly vague about the push to the east, merely saying that it is continuing. The report confirming capture of Ghent in Belgium which was among scores of towns falling into Allied hands. Among them was Armentieres, made famous by the world war 1 song about the "Madamoiselle from" that French village.

Allied troops headed by the Seventh Army, meanwhile, bored in from Southern France, through the Saone river valley and on toward Belfort gap from where an attack may springboard against southwestern Germany.

Patch Moves Up

Lieut. Gen. Alexander's Seventh Army elements closed in on Dijon, a vital communications center 38 miles north of Chalon-Sur-Saone. Opposition in this region was regarded as minor.

Heavy fighting also developed in the Adriatic sector of the Italian front. The battle raged between the upper Arno and the upper Tiber valleys, but Eighth Army forces managed to wrest strategic high ground from the Nazis and press on toward their immediate objective, the town of Riccione that forms a key bastion in the Gothic line.

Fifth Army patrols, at the same time, moved into the town of Prato, 15 miles northwest of Florence. Other Fifth Army elements mopped up the town of Lucca, but the Fifth's spearhead forces, already within six miles of the Gothic line, encountered stiffening opposition, heavy mortar and machine-gun fire and extensive mine fields.

Trap Faces Huns

On the eastern front, the fate of two hundred and fifty thousand Nazis seemed in the balance. Powerful Russian mechanized forces, sweeping sixty miles across Southwestern Romania to reach the Yugoslavian border, threatened to entrap the German garrisons in the Balkans.

In the Pacific, American Army and Navy bombers hammered Japanese installations from Marcus island as far south as the Netherlands Indies and Dutch New Guinea. Three more enemy freighters were reported sunk off the Philippines.

SOLONS OKEH ARMY PLAN FOR DEMOBILIZATION

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7—Members of congress today expressed full support today for the army's priority plan for part demobilization after the defeat of Germany.

Summing up congressional sentiment, Sen. Thomas (D) Utah, member of the senate military affairs committee, lauded the war department's program as having "recognized that the human element was a vital one."

Under the plan, men will be given priorities according to a point system giving weighted credits for total months in the army, total months overseas, decorations, combat service, and dependent children.

Men serving in the Pacific as well as in the European area will be eligible for release, but it is believed there will be no immediate wholesale discharges.

Some of the men battling in Europe will be transferred to the Pacific. Following release of the plan, the Navy announced that it could not demobilize until Japan is finally defeated.

until the time the Civil Affairs Administration can take over is to wait, keeping supposedly dangerous citizens in detention until the question of their identity can be cleared up.

Huns Seek Escape

It has already been established that some of the men in civilian clothes brought in by the Belgians are German soldiers and the others — the "bad Belgians" — had undoubtedly been doing some sniping around the town which was militarily unimportant but annoying. One officer has just been killed inspecting a bridge which the Germans blew up.

Generally the Belgians have been pretty cooperative and intensely demonstrative in their friendship as they pelted Americans with flowers and presented apples and plums in the lightning march through Belgium. Wherever our armored columns halted during the 45-mile seven-hour dash from Mons and Namur, crowds dashed up to shake hands and occasionally kiss the cheeks of our soldiers.

Recent efforts to round up and hand over "bad Belgians" to the Allies is partly due to a desire to aid the Allies and partly an attempt to aid one political party or another.

As of last night, official reports coming from the vicinity of Mons to the rear list more than 20,000 Germans captured as the lightning advance of First Army Tank columns shot across the border into Belgium proper.

Record Captures

One of the favorite topics of conversation amongst the G. I.'s is the capture of this or that number of enemy troops in the Mons area and practically all have captured enemy pistols to prove it.

The speed of this advance has been faster than anything ever achieved by the Russians, the last leg from Mons to Namur being achieved in what is believed to be record time.

In camp this morning as tanks are thundering on beyond Namur over improvised bridges, doughboys are talking about their accomplishments in taking prisoners.

Pvt. Robert S. Tanker of Charleston, Ill., just told how he and two others took 400 back to a town near Mons. The total armament of the G. I.'s in this case was one .45 automatic, one .30 caliber machine-gun and one tommy gun. The others were Pvt. Sylvester O'Rourke of Fond Du Lac, Wis., and Pfc. Ed McCarthy of Chicago.

Another soldier, Pfc. Ed Heinz, took 19 Geramns who had been hiding in one foxhole.

"I thought there was only three," said Heinz. "I was amazed."

Meanwhile infantry mopping up at the rear is still shepherding in prisoners in droves near Mons. The commanding general of a German infantry division said he expected to find a 15-mile gap and instead ran into a solid Allied column.

LAWRENCE LANE SEVERELY HURT BY HUN ROCKET

Sgt. Lawrence E. Lane has been wounded and in a hospital in England, according to word received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lane of Half avenue.

Sunday his family received a cablegram from Sgt. Lawrence stating he was in the hospital. Wednesday they received the following letter:

"Just a few lines to let you know that I am resting well now. Everything is going to be alright now. I guess you are wondering where and how it happened. I got the business from the rockets. Right leg is beat up, but still on me. Thank God for that. One piece lodged in the right forehead. It has practically healed up and my leg doesn't hurt too much. I guess I am lucky to be alive for they gave us the works."

His address is Sgt. Lawrence E. Lane, 35270619, Detachment of Patients, 4106 U. S. Army Hospital Plant, APO 511, care postmaster, New York, N. Y.

LONDON ROBOT BATTLE AT END

down and only nine percent reached the British capital.

Barrage baloons played an important part in the defensive measures taken against the robots and as many as 2,000 were used at one time.

In an optimistic vein Sandy said that "except possibly for a few last parting shots, the battle of London is over."

He disclosed that some of the flying bombs had been launched by planes and others carried pick-a-back by planes across the north sea.

The record bag of robots, set one day in August, was 97. On that day the Germans sent over 101 of the pilotless missiles and only four of them reached London.

Sandys, a member of parliament, said it had been known all along that the answer to the flying bombs was the capture of the launching sites in France and elsewhere.

From now on, he said, any robot bomb attacks will not be on a heavy scale, for hundreds of launching sites were captured during the last week.

British and American bombers, it was disclosed, dropped more than 100,000 tons of bombs on the launching sites, storage depots and communications in France as well as on factories and other plants in Germany.

All told, 450 British and American planes were lost, including many heavy and medium bombers, involving a loss of approximately 2,900 pilots and crew members.

Sandys expressed the British government's thanks to the Americans who, he said, "have thrown themselves into the job of beating the bombs with just as much determination and enthusiasm as if New York or Washington had been the victim of the attack.

"Some of the very latest American equipment was used with our heavy British guns. This was ordered from America earlier in the year when the danger of flying bomb attacks began to look imminent.

SILEX CO. BUYS PLANT OCCUPIED IN SOUTH END

Purchase of the property on Clinton street which the company has occupied since January, 1943, was announced Thursday by officials of the Silex company.

Joel W. Backus, manager of the local plant, said that his company was planning some improvements on the property but plans are not complete enough to be announced at the present time.

It was reported that the Silex company paid $35,000 for the property which was bought from the First National bank.

At present the company is manufacturing coffee makers. Arrangements are being made for the manufacture of electric irons, during the last quarter of the year. Mr. Backus said production of irons will start sometime after October 1.

CONVOY OF 150 SHIPS ARRIVES IN ENGLAND

He called for a strengthening of fighting spirit, declaring that "iron will and determination to safeguard policy by overcoming all hardships proves the source of our faith in certain victory."

Koiso asserted that "one of the most important measures" undertaken by his government was "the expansion and perfection of fighting power, especially air power."

"No time is more important than now," he said. "People in munitions production must rise to action."

Following previous Tokyo broadcasts mentioning an acute scarcity of ships, labor shortages and deficiencies in oil and machine tools production, Koiso told the diet that "the government intends to leave no stone unturned to eliminate all bottlenecks."

to conserve eyes and light!
Try this sleight-of-hand with a damp rag. Rub it over G-E MAZDA lamp bulbs and lamp reflector bowls—and presto, more light to help you see better. Why? Because dust can hold back as much as 50% of light.
Shade tricks for more light: use white-lined shades; brush silk shades; reline parchment shades, using shelf paper and Scotch tape or flat-white paint. And be sure that shades are deep enough.
Help to conserve also by arranging lamps and furniture so each lamp can if necessary serve two or more people with good light. But be sure each person sits close enough to the lamp.
Have eyes examined by a competent eyesight specialist. Good light helps make seeing easier; it does not correct eye defects.
Tilt work or reading to the angle that gets rid of reflected glare. Try it: You can see the difference.
Turn off lamps you're not using. This simple flip of the wrist helps the nation's program to conserve materials.

130 LOCAL MEN IN FAR PLACES CAST BALLOTS

Returns Being Made On More Than 600 Ballots Sent Overseas

Pickaway county men in service are voting this year, even if many of them are in distant parts of the world.

This fact was made clear Thursday with the announcement by election board officials that approximately 130 ballots had been returned to the office from service men overseas.

More than 600 ballots have been mailed out to county men in service overseas, either as the result of requests by the men or requests from members of their families at home.

Relatives of men and women in service can still request ballots for the fighters. First ballots were mailed out August 10 and are still being mailed as requests come to the office in the court house.

Service men and women home on furlough can vote in a special booth in the office.

ARGENTINE HOSTILITY

ARGENTINA under its pro-Axis rulers is not often thought of as actually doing the United States any harm. But it now appears that the Argentines have positively injured this country.

Brazil, which is loyally supporting the United Nations, planned to send a large body of troops across the seas. They would have been very helpful, either in the actual fighting or in work behind the lines which relieved American soldiers for battle. About that time Argentina arose as a menace, and the Brazilians thought it safer to keep their army at home as a protection against their doubtful neighbor. Thanks to Argentina, therefore, the United States has had to bear a burden in the war which Brazil would have liked to share.

The fact is that Fascism and Axis sympathies are of real concern to the world, wherever these tendencies may be found.

THE HISTORICAL BEARDS

WITH the recent publication of the Beards' "Basic History of the United States," Charles and Mary Beard bring to a close their long collaboration in interpreting the American scene. The Beards have devoted their lives to finding out and explaining the reasons why the great American promise of equal opportunity for all, and poverty for none, has not been fulfilled. They have tried to search out the social and economic causes underlying the facts of American history, and have reinterpreted it in the light of their findings. To history, and to all who study America, they have offered not only knowledge but understanding.

America has not always understood the Beards. After the publication of "An Economic Interpretation of the Constitution," there were editorial writers who screamed condemnation of "the purveyors of filthy and rotten perversions." When Charles Beard resigned from Columbia University in 1917 on an issue of academic freedom involving other men, one newspaper printed an editorial entitled "Columbia's Deliverance."

Rantings against the Beards have long been forgotten, but their works are still inspiring Americans to lend their efforts to bring the American promise a little closer to fulfilment. The last Beard book, "The Republic," a quietly written little dialogue about the Constitution, has become a best-seller.

A real way to celebrate on V-Day would be to serve a second piece of butter.

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

FEAR SLOWED FIGHTING

WASHINGTON—The inside story can now be told regarding one of the greatest worries of the Allied High Command in connection with the Normandy invasion—namely, casualties. It was feared they would be terrifically high.

In fact, Prime Minister Churchill, who had hung back from a cross-channel front for two years, feared the Allies might suffer losses comparable to the early days of the last war, when the cream of British manhood, then relatively untrained, was mowed down in Flanders field. He frequently told FDR that he was worried about losing the "seed" of Britain.

This worry gives an insight into the sudden change between the type of slow fighting during the first few weeks in Normandy and the headlong onrush of today.

Allied orders during the early weeks in Normandy were to advance under a "curtain of steel." As a result, the greatest artillery barrage ever laid down in history was thrown at the Germans in advance of Allied infantry. It was an artillery barrage so heavy that it wiped out almost everything in its path.

However, it was slow. It took time to unload big guns on shallow beaches. It also took time to batter down German positions. But once these positions were battered down, and the rim of German defense was broken, the Allies found what General Eisenhower knew was the case—a complete military vacuum inside.

In other words, the Nazis had staked everything on holding the rim, had no defenses in the interior. That is the explanation for the headlong rush of Allied forces in recent weeks. The Nazis were gambling on their Atlantic Wall, a wall which could not stand up under Bradley's "curtain of steel."

NOTE—General Montgomery's cautious advances in Normandy probably reflected in part Churchill's worry over casualties. However, he has been cautious in other areas also. Before the Battle of El Alamein, when the British Army had been pushed back and back across the desert toward Cairo, Montgomery queried his chief, General Alexander: "What casualties can I take?" Alexander, with the fate of the Suez Canal at stake, replied: "One hundred percent." Caution, of course, is no reflection on courage.

CHIANG AND SON

The way the story of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's 16-year-old concubine got started, according to high Chinese sources, was indirectly through his son.

The Generalissimo ("Jissimo" to his friends) has been living in the Summer palace with his second son, who is young, attractive, and has his quota of girl friends. One young lady in particular has been in the Summer palace longer than the others, all of which gave rise to the unfortunate rumor that this was why Madame Chiang Kai-Shek left home.

The young lady may marry the Jissimo's son.

This son, who happens to be Chiang's favorite, was born of a Japanese mother. Chiang went to the Japanese West Point as a young man.

His eldest son went to Moscow as a youngster, made pro-Communist speeches and said a good many uncomplimentary things about the political views of his father. Chiang doesn't particularly care for him, and it's mutual. He does care for his second son.

Psychosomatic Ills

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE LATEST subject which is fluttering the dovecotes of medical thought is called psychosomatic medicine. Its fundamental thesis is that many, if not most, of the chronic illnesses of mankind result partly from bodily or physical derangements (soma—the body) and partly from the state of the patient's mind and soul (psycho—soul) and really by an interaction of both of them. There is nothing startlingly new about this, but the recent studies have served to focus it and state clearly the objectives of treatment in such cases.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

The specialty of psychosomatics has already attained considerable respectability. Dr. Henry Christian, of Harvard, in editing the latest edition of Osler's Textbook on Medicine, which has for over half a century been the bible of practitioners, puts a chapter on psychosomatic disorders at the very beginning of the book. There are two text books published devoted exclusively to the subject, and the whole issue of the last number of the Medical Clinics of North America is labelled "Psychosomatic Medicine."

Idea of Psychosomatics

There is a man who has the disease and the disease which has the man. That is the basic idea of psychomatics. In the case of the acute diseases—infections, traumatisms, neoplasms—the relationship is fairly simple and the entities of body and mind are fairly separate. But in many other conditions they depend on a long stretch of background of association and partnership of brother body and brother mind and brother soul.

The human organism passes through levels of growth and development. They can be roughly classified and described thus:

1. The somatic phase. The baby is nearly all body. As development proceeds the child begins to have ideas about his bodily functions. Household environment conditions this to a considerable extent. If the parents are fussy, and that means fussy beyond the requirements of hygiene, about what foods are good or "bad for you," or about regularity of the bowels, or exaggerate little upsets—such as temperature rises—there is always the possibility that the psyche will be overly conscious of the body, and these ideas are frequently carried over into adult life.

Development of Ego

2. The narcisstic stage—the development of the ego. This, as we all know, can be over-developed, and accounts for the psychology of the only child. Brothers and sisters teach the child there are other people in the world, all just as important as he is.

3. The suigenderistic stage—which is awareness of other humans of the same sex, begins about the age of five and lasts until puberty.

4. The altergenderistic stage—during which there is adaptation to humans of the other gender. It is hardly necessary to expatiate on how much foundation for future ill health—mental and bodily—is laid down in this stage.

5. The phase of adjustment of all the stages that have gone before. In most of us the adjustment is pretty good—surprisingly good as we look back on the possibilities. In others not so good—and these are the patients of the psychosomatic doctors.

We will consider them in more detail tomorrow.

Author's Dilemma: What To Do About War of 1812 | Cabbie-Philosopher on the Women War Work Problem

By HELEN ESSARY
Central Press Columnist

● WASHINGTON—There's a lot of talk everywhere you go about "the race problem." C. M. Forester, who has been writing about "Capt. Horatio Hornblower," that irreconcilable old salt, for many a cheerful year, says he first began to think personally of the race problem when he learned that every third child born is a Chinese.

When Forester made this profound discovery, he already had two children. This made the future seem confused. For nobody, especially an Asiatic, welcomes an Eurasian into the family of nations. And it's very hard on an Eurasian to be one.

Horatio Hornblower Faces Doom

Forester is a mild, completely English person with a devastating wit. He announced to some friends that he was going to kill Horatio Hornblower off. Poor old fellow, he had lived through serials and short stories and volumes and lectures, and now he had come face to face with the War of 1812. He simply had to die with the typhus fever or something.

"Let the poor fellow live on," roared the friends, "he's such a swell chap. You ought to be able to think of some way of getting him through 1812."

"Not a chance," said Forester, "I simply can't have him come to Washington and attack the capital and burn the White House—not at this time. And I can't have him defeated ignominously. No, my friends, Horatio Hornblower has simply got to die."

Forester has been in Washington writing a magazine article on the technical side of the Navy. He hurried back to his present home in Berkeley, Cal., in order to see his wife before she left with a group of small boys to pick prunes in Southern California.

Forester is seriously considering becoming an American citizen. Many Britons are planning to take out United States papers after the war, so a British embassy attache told me.

'S Tough When Wife Works, Too

● FROM TIME TO TIME this thoughtful and all seeing department will call attention to certain problems which the post-war planners had better be brooding over.

Today's problem is taken from life in Washington, which, in this case, is "Conversation in Taxicab." To begin—the taxi was whizzing around a corner on two unrecapped tires when a woman started across the street ahead. The taxi driver honked and honked his horn. The woman did not change her pace of leisurely ambling.

"Looks like you can't do anything with women nowadays," said the driver to the man passenger on the back seat.

"I'll say you can't," agreed the passenger. "They go where and when and how they please. Maybe it's because so many of them have jobs."

"Brother, you said something," called the driver as he gave his cab the red and yellow light hurdle. "Just between us, what do you think of women making so much money? You think they'll give the jobs back to the men when the war is over?"

The passenger said he thought they might, but it had been his experience that whenever women seemed to be up to good works, like helping out, there was a catch somewhere.

"That's the truth," said the taxi driver, grinding his brakes sorrowfully. "That's what's worrying me. In my case, there is a catch. You wouldn't believe what is happening in my family. Listen:

"My wife has got a swell job. Makes more money than I do. And what do you suppose she does with it?

"She says, 'Dear, I don't want to deprive you of the pride you naturally take in being the family breadwinner. We'd better go on as before.' Then she banks her money in her own name, mindja, and me—poor sap that I am—I pay the bills! Is there a catch? I'll say there's a catch. Look out for a woman when she's purring."

SYNOPSIS

A leading and popular resident of Talbot, sleepy little Chesapeake Bay village, is MRS. EUNICE REYNOLDS, elderly and unable to walk, but the possessor of young ideas. She has been dominated by her strong-willed granddaughter.

LAURA, who lives with her Mrs. Reynolds hires

ANNE WILSON, personable young New Yorker, to be her nurse. Longtime fiance of Laura is RUSSELL SMITH, conservative young attorney. The placidity of Russell's life is shattered by the arrival, after a long absence, of his outspoken, liberal brother.

DAN.

YESTERDAY Mrs. Reynolds follows up her "declaration of independence" with a sharply worded warning to Dr. Banning, her physician, that she will take no more "bossing" from him, either.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

RUSSELL SMITH was a busy man all day in Weston, as only a young, serious lawyer can be. Court term was beginning soon and he had a number of cases to argue. He had been very fortunate both in the number of cases he had gotten and in the quality of them.

Young lawyers usually got what older ones didn't want to handle for one reason or another, but he had not only cases he could take a real interest in, cases he could believe in, but also clients who were willing and able to pay. It was a side of his affairs he had no intention of neglecting. And the idea of losing a case didn't occur to him. Already he had established himself as a lawyer who won. He intended to go on winning.

So he was too busy to lunch with Laura Reynolds even when she got him on the phone and told him it was very important. He told her he was so deep in things he couldn't break away. "Can't you tell me over the phone?" he concluded.

"No, most certainly can't," she answered, and hung up at once. He thought of ringing her back, but decided against it. After all, he was busy and he didn't see why anybody couldn't say anything over the phone, unless it was something highly improper. He smiled a little at the thought of Laura Reynolds doing or wanting to say anything improper.

He lunched at his desk on a sandwich and a very rich malted milk. He didn't think malted milks with extra ice cream in them were very dignified, so he only indulged in the privacy of his office when Miss Tiller, his stenographer, was out. He laughed at himself for such minor hypocrisy, but he had always had a weakness for malted milks which he had kept even from Laura. The thought made him pause, glass in hand. There was so much of his life that he had kept from Laura, even though he saw her every day and they were engaged. He didn't talk about himself to her and, to be exact, she didn't talk about herself to him. She talked about her business venture of the moment and he talked about his cases, but that was all. Each knew what the other was doing, but not what the other was thinking. It had always seemed a sensible, dignified way of doing. He had no intention of sitting holding her hands and "sighing like a furnace." He was quite sure Shakespeare was mocking such silliness when he wrote the line ending, "with a woeful ballad made to his mistress' eyebrow."

But still he and Laura had been a strange engaged couple for five years now. Last night for a moment he had suddenly felt very near to her. He had wanted to catch her in his arms. And she had only wanted to tell Anne Wilson she was not wanted. Anne Wilson. The name slipped nicely off the tongue, and Eleanor Bancroft had seemed to back up Mrs. Reynolds' opinion of her. Laura, on her side, had been brusque, if not actually rude. He had noticed Harry Bancroft glancing up at her in his quiet way. He valued the opinions of Harry and Eleanor Bancroft. Likewise he valued Mrs. Reynolds' opinion when it was as definite as it had been last night.

He was frank with himself, as he could be on occasion. He didn't like the way Laura had acted on complete prejudice. It was quite true no one knew anything about this Anne Wilson beyond the fact that after several days at the inn Eleanor Bancroft had liked her enough to recommend her to Mrs. Reynolds and want her to stay in Talbot. Why should Laura have decided ipso facto that Anne would not do? Wasn't Laura being unkind, if not presumptuous, in countermanding her mother's express wishes? And why should Laura want Mrs. Slotts, who was called an old witch by more people than her mother? He was glad he had decided not to lunch with Laura, at least until he had seen this Anne Wilson for himself.

With that much settled in his mind, he finished his lunch, hid the malted milk container under a newspaper in his wastebasket so Miss Tiller wouldn't notice, and took up his work again with renewed eagerness. It wasn't until 6 o'clock that he remembered he wasn't eating at his restaurant in Weston, but going home to Talbot. He was having dinner with Dan. The idea was rather exciting all at once. It was years since he'd had a good long talk with Dan. He'd been in a big law office in Baltimore at the time Dan had run away. He'd only opened up here because Dan had run away and his mother insisted on having a son at hand. He was glad he'd come back to Weston now, although his mother was gone. The eastern shore was his world and his time in Baltimore had been conclusive proof of it. He belonged here.

And now Dan was back. He seemed to fill Russell's mind as he apologized to Miss Tiller for keeping her so late and took her home in consequence. Miss Tiller was about his own age and had a bony face and high-bridged nose which always made him think of a boat. Her father did have a little boatyard and built work boats for oystermen, and small sailing yachts. Miss Tiller affected a great scorn of water and all that floated upon it, but she was a very good legal stenographer. Russell considered himself quite lucky to get her, since she had worked in both Baltimore and Philadelphia, where she had naturally earned more money than he could pay.

Once Miss Tiller was dropped at her door and Russell had refused her mother's invitation to stay to supper, he crossed the railroad tracks of the discontinued line which had run on to Ocean City and turned by the high school into the Talbot road. It was a lovely 10-mile drive home. The road swept between wheat fields, through lovely stretches of woodland, noisy and beautiful with spring, and across the lovely mirrorlike back reaches of water. Peachblossom Creek. What a lovely name for a lovely stretch of water framed by great clumps of trees. He laughed as he paused to watch the sinking sun cross a broad field on the next rise. There were sheep grazing, and cattle and horses. A few pigs grunted contentedly by a fence that was almost buried under wild honeysuckle vines. Soon the air would be heavy with the fragrance and the warm breeze would sing with the hum of bees.

With a laugh he broke off his thoughts. Dan was affecting him as he always had since Dan was a kid who didn't want to do arithmetic and preferred studying about flowers and birds. Russell remembered spanking Dan for staying out of school. It had been hard to do, but he'd done it thoroughly, as he did everything which he believed to be his duty. Dan had sworn at him and so had been spanked some more. Dan had finally laughed at him and said, "I'll forget this, but I'll always remember the birds I saw this afternoon. Nobody can take that away from me."

STARS SAY—

For Thursday, September 7

STEADY and well-organized efforts to achieve uncommonly promising and productive objectives are encouraged by this day's lunar and mutual aspects. It is probable that a unique, novel and ingenious attack of strange openings or propositions may reach a new high in the way of accomplishment. While in such projects the influence and financial assistance of those in standing may be counted upon there may also be many conflicting and menacing circumstances, which may involve change, travel and entirely new and original tactics. In all emergencies be conservative with funds and do not provoke antagonisms.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is have the encouragement of a year of great and enduring achievements, in which strange and perplexing problems or propositions arise to tax the ingenuity, acumen, and brave attack, under opposition, rivalry and probably unique factors. Concentrated efforts, well-laid plans and strategies may attract the attention and hearty cooperation of those in high places, and in the long run reach new levels of accomplishment. Work for security, sound foundations and worthwhile triumphs but be conservative with funds and friends.

A child born on this day may have staunch ad dependable talents, skills and aims, with ingenuity, intuition and novelty or progressive ways and means of achieving worthwhile objectives, even against rivalry and jealousy.

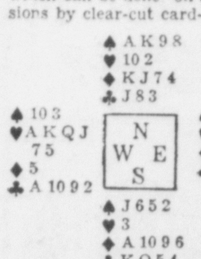
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

TRY TO MAKE CERTAIN

PURE GUESSWORK is applied more to finessing than probably any other part of bridge. The guessing is done usually on either of two questions. One is whether to finesse or not to finesse. The other is which direction to finesse. Of course, there is also the problem of whether to try a single or double finesse. Ofter there is some way to figure out the probabilities. Better still is to make certain, which can be done on some occasions by clear-cut card-reading.



(Dealer: West. East-West vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
1 ♥	Pass	2 ♥	Dbl
4 ♥	4 ♠

Both defenders thought they had a chance to beat that, so they did not sacrifice at 5-Hearts. East led his heart 4, the J winning and the Q coming back, to be ruffed in the dummy with the spade 2. North scored the trump K and A, leaving the good Q out, and led the club 3 to the K, the A winning. West sent back his club 2 to the J, and it was followed by the 8 lead, which East trumped with his spade Q.

A heart came back for a ruff by the dummy's last trump and a discard of the diamond 4. North had apparently gained one trick by this device of getting East to lead a heart in order to avoid leading into the diamonds, but further study showed that the diamond discard did him no good. He still had to avoid losing to the diamond Q.

Debating this, he decided that West, who had bid, was more likely to hold the crucial card than East, who had not bid. So he scored the diamond A and led the 10, intending to finesse. But West discarded a heart, and North now knew East was sure to win with his diamond Q.

Simple card-counting could have made this a sure thing. East's fourth-best lead of the heart 4 placed West with 6 hearts. West had followed suit to 2 spades. East's ruffing of the second club showed West had 4 there. Add 6 and 2 and 4 and you have 12. So West could have had only one diamond. That figuring would have told North to take the first diamond with his own K and finesse against East for the Q.

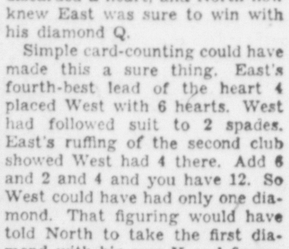
Tomorrow's Problem



(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

How should South play for 5-Clubs on this deal after West leads the diamond K?

HEAVY RETAIL BUYING

Nearly 20,000 department store owners and buyers registered for the market. Most of the 2,400 Chicago wholesalers participating reported more buyers on hand than in 1943.

Bits on Books

By Enid Denham

Although to me, as to most librarians, books in series have little appeal and less reader interest being for the most part simply long drawn out stories of what have been one good yarn, there has been one happy exception to this rule. On the fifteenth of September there will be published the Building of Jalna which will be (believe it or not) the ninth volume to be published about the saga of Jalna. The first to be written and published, "Jalna" and then "Whiteoaks of Jalna" were met with such enthusiasm that the author, Mazo de La Roche, continued their family history and finally went back to the early days and the founding of original homestead "Jalna." Now in this last she goes even further back to the time when old Adeline was young and with her husband first making her home in windswept Canada.

Next to come in the series is "Young Renny," Jalna 1906," the story of Renny and Meg when they were young and their father was still living. Philip's first wife had died leaving him the two spoiled wild youngsters and it was to secure for them a governess that he brought to Jalna the shy quiet soul whom he was later to marry and who was to die in giving birth to their fourth son, Wakefield.

"In Whitoak Heritage" Renny's father has died leaving Jalna somewhat done at the heels. Renny comes home from the First World War to take over his inheritance and the care of his four half brothers, a sister, two uncles, and his grandmother, who has money of her own, a fortune, in fact but who refuses to spend any part of it. It is her delight to hint as to whom will inherit after she is gone, and after all she is only ninety three and good for many years yet.

"Jalna" continues—(tho it still makes delightful reading as a single volume) with the story, Eden is a poet and his marriage to Alayne with her New England background and different ways and Pier's marriage to Pheasant bring new problems to the household.

In "Whitoaks of Jalna" old Adeline at 101, dies and her fortune goes to young Finch. The following book tells how Finch spent his fortune. It was easy with so many to do for, so many needing his financial aid. The story continues—her relations to Renny. Finch too is married and tries to combine his music with his private life.

At 33 Renny is very much the Master of Jalna," in and out of love fiery, affectionate, with a strong sense of loyalty toward his family which by now amounts almost to a clan. For the first time in many years he and Alayne are alone at Jalna. With "Whitoak Harvest" the family moves in again on the scene. Jalna is once more prosperous and there some beautiful scenes of horses and horse shows. Wakefield's Course is the story of Wakefield, his love for Paula, his retreat to the monastery and finally his heroism at Dunkirk, for war has again come to Jalna. Perhaps it is the characterization that has given this series so much of its vitality, certainly much of the fire fled down when old Adeline died, for her zest for living and her feeling for family was strong.

We are awaiting with interest the new volume "Building of Jalna"

These books may be gotten at the Circleville Public Library.

STYLES TAKE ON EXHUBERANCE OF PEACE TIMES

Clothes Flattering And Far More Gala Than In Many Seasons

NEW YORK, Sept. 7—Victory headlines have moved from the front pages to the fashion columns. Styles being shown this week by New York's high style stores—fashions that may be in competition with Paris' before the season's end—have a flair and exuberance missing from previous wartime collections.

Clothes are frankly flattering, and far more gala than in many a season. New silhouettes are emerging — the lengthened look from shoulder to hip, tunics, back interest, rising necklines and emphasis on soft drapery.

Designer Sally Milgrim, presenting her new collection, summed up today's fashion trend: "Psychologically American fashions are on the march. There is a new daring, our designers are impelled by a vision of world events we can now foresee."

Capelet Silhouette

She sponsors the caplet silhouette — a sleeveless caplet jacket worn over a long-sleeved dress of purple—real and simulated tunics, sheath dresses for evening with the skirts slit to the knee, swathed hiplines, hemline flounces, persian drapes and rich new colors.

An entirely new silhouette is sponsored by designer Fira Benenson . . . lengthened look from shoulder to the hem which makes the waistline appear to drop.

While the waistline remains in its normal position, a new device —drapery shirring or bows, placed below the waist — carries the glance below the waistline and adds grace and length to the silhouette.

Unpressed Flutings

Unpressed flutings appear a number of times, often emphasizing the important U line at the back of dressed and jackets, and diagonally wrapped folds button at the back to add interest and fullness.

Coats in the collection are entirely new, all with the longer appearing waist or the square silhouette. The most outstanding was a real steal from a Chinese Mandarin's coat. It's a square looking hip length coat of black wool, the coat hanging open in front like a Mandarin's and the traditional front warmer is inset—this one made of soft black suede. It's worn over a matching wool skirt.

Hats in the collection bow to the current bulky trend only in that they contain more material. They're middle-sized up-sided salad bowls and berets, with a feeling of lightness about them. Wings, ostrich feathers and flowers decorate the hats which are all of fabric. Black is the outstanding color, followed by brown and a very dark blue called anthracite.

Fewer sequins appear than in former seasons but jet embroidery and tucking is widely used.

Jacket dresses were prominent in both collections, forecasting a trend when fabric conservation rulings are lifted. These now must be sold as two separate costumes.

Careful attention to detail and an all-over loveliness were the collections' highlight.

SHELTER HOUSE AT PARK TO BE 40 BY 100 FEET

Board Seeks Estimates On Building Cost Of Big Structure

City park commissioners Thursday were seeking estimates on the construction of a shelter house for Ted Lewis park.

At a meeting Wednesday members agreed to construct a building 40 feet by 100 feet. Both ends of the structure will be closed, but the sides will be open. Overhanging eaves will give protection against rain and hot sun. The floor of the building is to be of smooth cement so that it can be used for dancing.

Commissioners are seeking estimates of the cost of the structure planned and approval of War Production Board for the building. After estimates are obtained the board will advertise for bids on the building.

Cost of the project is to be financed with money secured from the girls' softball game staged in August and contributions of Ted Lewis and his friends.

TIGERS TEAM TO BEAT, YANKEE BOSS DECLARES

Detroit Game And A Half Behind Leaders; May Gain More Today

NEW YORK, Sept. 7 — While they've made no public pronouncement on the matter, people up Yankee stadium way secretly, silently expect the Bronx Bombers to win the American League pennant this year, but today they looked in the direction of Detroit and crossed their fingers.

Ed Barrow, major domo of the Yanks' front office, openly admits the Tigers are the team to beat.

"Detroit will be the toughest club for us to keep down," asserted the 76-year-old Mr. Barrow.

"The Tigers," he said, "not only have the best pitching, but they've proved terrific in the clutches."

These observations from Barrow came as the Tiger tornado rolled up to within a game and a half of the league-leading Yankees, and only one game behind the St. Louis Browns.

This high-flying Detroit gang edged a notch closer to the leaders with a 3 to 2 triumph over the Chicago White Sox last night in the lone major league contest on schedule.

The Tigers grabbed a two-run lead over the Sox' John Humphries, and added the clincher tally in the third. Chicago scored single markers in the second third, but collected eight hits off Rufe Gentry in comparison to seven Humphries allowed Detroit.

With the Yankees idle again today while both St. Louis and the terrific Tigers engage in games that may bring the American League chase closer to a dead heat, there was little wonder that the Bronx brigade took note of the situation.

He may have been whistling through the graveyard, of course, but Spokesman Barrow had virtually nothing to say in favor of the St. Louis Browns.

"The toughest team between the Yanks and the pennant," he stated, "is Detroit," adding that Boston's Red Sox have a fighting chance to win.

The Tigers, who chinned themselves just off the cellar deck since July 10, square off today with Cleveland. The Brownies tackle Chicago.

A victory for St. Louis over the Sox, in their night contest in Chicago, would deadlock the league lead insofar as the Yanks, who polished off the Camp Shanks Army club, 14-1, in an exhibition game yesterday, have a holiday.

The Tigers, of course, could nudge in behind the Yanks by only one game if Detroit takes the Indians.

Far as bearing on the pennant race, National League games for the day were of little consequence, except for the trio of cellar dwellers—Brooklyn, Philadelphia and Boston. For your information, however, the league leading St. Louis Cardinals meet Chicago at night in Sportsman's park, Boston plays at New York, Pittsburgh invades Cincinnati and Brooklyn appears at Philadelphia.

WILLIAMS QUITS RING AFTER WIN OVER ANGOTT

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 7—Ike Williams, Trenton lightweight, hung up his boxing gloves for the duration today after winning his second split decision in as many fights with ex-lightweight champ Sammy Angott of Washington, Pa., before 12,000 fans at Shibe park.

Williams' triphammer blows were not much in evidence during last night's meeting with Angott and the decision, questioned loudly by a good share of the fans, was based on the votes of Referee Matt Adgie and one judge.

The victory was Williams' 12th straight and marked his final ring appearance for the duration. The slim Negro is slated to enter the Army September 27.

WASHINGTON MEET ENDS

CHICAGO, Sept. 7 — This was get-away day at Washington park where the combined meeting with Arlington park broke all records for attendance and wagering during its 70 days. The Hawthorne track opens tomorrow for 34 days. More than $66,000,000 will have gone through the mutuel machines at the Arlington-Washington park meeting by the time the gates close tonight, an increase of more than 50 percent over last year which was the high until now.

'LICENSE REVOKED'

PITTSBURGH—A liquor control board agent, testifying in a cafe's appeal from its liquor license revocation, described for County Judge Blair F. Gunther in highly restrained, but nevertheless precise terms a dance in which he said two women patrons of the tavern participated. The cafe's attorney jumped to his feet and objected to the testimony, declaring the restaurant had a dance permit. "Such dancing is indecent," the judge snapped back, adding, in afterthought, "even with a permit."

BREWERS TAKE FIFTH AA TITLE; BIRDS PLAY TWO

By International News Service

The Columbus Red Birds were scheduled to play a double-header tonight with the Louisville Colonels after last night's contest was called on account of rain.

The Bird management, hopeful of regaining fourth place in the standings in order to get a berth in the Association playoffs, will pit Stan Partenheimer and either John Herr or Ken Burkhart against Otis Clark and George Diehl.

Milwaukee, in the meantime, chalked up a 6 to 0 triumph over St. Paul in the first game of a double bill to annex their second straight American Association pennant. The victory was gained early in the fray, the Brewers scoring four runs in the first frame. It was Milwaukee's fifth title in the history of the league.

The Saints took the second game, 6 to 5 in ten innings to maintain their two-game lead over Columbus in the fourth-place struggle.

In the only other game played, Earl Jones, southpaw, hurled the Toledo Mud Hens to an easy 4 to 0 triumph over Indianapolis. Stanley Klopp was the losing pitcher.

Sewell and Browns Confident They Will Win American Title

CHICAGO, Sept. 7 — At or about the same time the Detroit Tigers were moving in on everybody by an extra half-game at Comiskey park, the supposedly bedraggled Browns came straggling into town late last night, appearing surprisingly chipper under the circumstances. The circumstances, it may be added included (A) the fact they'd dissipated a 7-game lead, being now ½-game behind the Yankees and one game ahead of the Tigers with only 2 to play; and (B) that, for reasons not immediately clear, they arrived hungry.

But if anybody was at all irked or distressed by any of this, it failed to show with the group that hit the Del Prado hotel lobby with some show of bluster, ven while toting its own duffel. And jauntiest of them all was Mr. Luke Sewell, the manager who, when accosted, just saved himself . . . by a split second's hesitation . . . from claiming the American League championship.

What he said, in effect, was that the Browns were a good club that had merely ha dsome bad luck recently; were, in fact, the best club in the league and fully expected to prove it during the run down the stretch.

"Why not?" said he, with an air of feeling he's being entirely reasonable. "We were the best club for 121 days while we led the league. In our 'book' . . . and the great thing is that the boys are still loose and easy and confident . . . we're still the best It's something we plan on proving during the last three weeks. As for me, I'm convinced . . ."

"The Browns don't have to convince me; it's the rest of the league that needs a little attention in that department. Man for man, we've got the best club. But when we lost Muncrief with a sore arm, our pitching just couldn't take up the slack.

"He's ready again now and will start against the White Sox in the five-game series here. That's where we'll get going again.

"Why, we've been getting four and five runs, then losing in the late innings. But it ought to be different here, with Muncrief working again."

If the Browns can't hit the three-cherries payoff in this series, they figure to be practically through for the year. Mr. Sewell shook his head.

"It isn't that kind ofaleague," he explained. "Nobody's going to keep on winning long from the rest of them. That goes for the Yankees. They didn't look any too good the last time we looked at them. The Tigers are all right, as long as those two pitchers (Newhouser and Trout) keep going the way they are.

"But they can't afford to have either man trail off even a little through the rest of September. They aren't just that kind of a club. Everything, in fact, depends on the two pitchers. Perhaps too much."

The Browns appeared to reflect the optimism of their manager, a very engaging party whose gusto was just contagious enough to cause you at parting to say something bright about seeing him in St. Louis.

With that, you found yourself being stared at "down the barrel" with a pair of very level eyes.

"I hope so," he said, simply.

And quite suddenly, for no outstanding reason, you were hoping that his hope would not be in vain.

SELECTS IN 3-2 WIN OVER STARS

Third Game Of Challenge Series To Be Played At 6:30 Today

All Stars and Selects were all even Thursday as the result of a 3-2 victory scored Wednesday evening at Ted Lewis park by the Selects.

Playing errorless ball behind the five-hit pitching of Warren Elliott, the Selects gained revenge for the shutout scored Tuesday evening by the All Stars. Two runs in the third inning gave them a 2-0 lead, then they scored another counter in the fourth. All Stars scored first in the sixth and added a fourth in the seventh when White came home on a passed ball just before Seymour struck out to end the game.

Third game of the series will be played at 6:30 p. m. Thursday and the picnic planned for players and other participants in league play will be held immediately after the game at the Country Club. In case of rain, forcing postponement of the game, the picnic will start at 7 p. m., as originally scheduled.

BUCKS STRESS OFFENSE DURING EARLY PRACTICE

COLUMBUS, Sept. 7 — Coach Carroll Widdoes' Bucks today completed three days of practice session with yesterday's two hours spent entirely on the aerial game.

"I would say we are still very much in the embryo stage with a long way to go before reaching our goal," Widdoes asserted in commenting on the progress of the Ohio State team.

"As we progress, we will devote a little time each day to defense. For the first week or two, however, the emphasis will be on the offense. We now have five running and two pass plays," he added.

The Bucks will practice at 9:15 a. m. and 4 p. m. as long as the two-a-day sessions are in vogue, the coach said.

North Carolina is said to be the only state that has filled every blank in the census of farm products, yielding all the crops grown in both northern and southern sections of the United States.

RACING PUBLICATIONS ARE DENIED NEWSPAPER RATE

NEW YORK, Sept. 7—Three national racing publications today were denied status as newspapers under OPA's interpretation of the term. Claims of the racing sheets were denied by David P. Woolley, OPA regional director, in upholding a Brooklyn ration board decision that denied Israel Becker, distributor of the turf papers, extra gasoline coupons provided for concerns engaged in wholesale circulation of newspapers.

The publications affected directly by Woolley's ruling were the William Armstrong Daily Sports, the Daily Green Sheet and the National Racing Program.

LT. KIEFER MISSING

CHICAGO, Sept. 7 — Lt. Ralph A. Kiefer, 24, a brother of Ensign Adolph Kiefer, holder of many world swimming championships, was reported missing in action today. A War department message to his mother, Mrs. Emma L. Kiefer, said his plane was shot down over Germany August 16.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Thad Phibbs' Formula for Fun

Thad Phibbs has a theory of enjoyment all his own. The more tired he is from working at the War Plant, the more fun he has pitching horseshoes with the boys these summer evenings.

"That's because I feel that I deserve it," Thad says simply.

And I wonder if he isn't right. I wonder if we don't enjoy things in proportion as we know we've earned them. Is a little relaxation ever more welcome than after a hard day's work? Do we appreciate our little pleasures quite as much as when we know in our hearts we've done a good job well?

From where I sit, that's one of the things this wartime strain has taught us. We're all of us working hard at our jobs, doing our level best to pull our weight. And we're learning the little rewards, the simple pleasures—a home-cooked meal, a glass of beer with friends—are more welcome now than ever... because we've earned them!

Recalled to U. S.?

CRITICISM of the British policy toward India by President Roosevelt's personal representative, Ambassador William Phillips, above, has led the British government to request his recall, according to Washington diplomatic circles. Phillips has been attached to General Eisenhower's headquarters in London since his mission to India last year. The U. S. state department recently announced that he was returning next month "for urgent family reasons." (International)

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Tm. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

By DREW PEARSON

Horse") King has finally relented and will let naval officers shed their jackets under certain conditions in hot weather, a lot of sailors wish he would also examine the uniform of the enlisted man.

Most enlisted men would whoop with joy if their present, long-outmoded uniform was discarded. What most people don't realize is that the sailor's uniform was designed by the British about two hundred years ago and is now just as outmoded as the sailing ship.

Take, for instance, the broad collar worn over the shoulders. It was designed for vermin-infested ships of the 1700's, when sailors had to be deloused and a broad collar was practicable to catch the tar oils used in a sailor's hair.

Again, the bell-shaped trousers, which flap around the ankles and nearly trip the wearer when he runs, were designed for days when sailors rolled their trousers up over their legs to scrub decks. Today, dungarees are provided for this sort of work.

Again the drop-front, 13-button trousers were designed for a day two centuries ago when tidiness was nothing like what it is today.

One thing which particularly gripes the enlisted man is the tight-fitting waist of his blouse, which has to be slipped on and off over his head. If a sailor is dumped into the water and has to swim for any length of time, it is almost impossible to get the blouse off. It is tight, sticks to the body, and you can't very well swim and at the same time hold two arms above your head while you wriggle out of your middy.

Some of the boys wish that Admiral King would take off his new grey-green uniform, designed for him by His Majesty's tailor in London, long enough to experiment with a middy-blouse in the water. They think that, despite a century's delay, he would then design for them a new uniform overnight.

VARIED PROGRAM SET

Light classics and songs from musical comedies make up Dr Frank Black's concert program on Friday. The orchestra and chorus open the show with "This Can't Be Love," after which Soprano Lucille Manners sings Tschaikowsky's "None But the Lonely Heart." Ross Graham, baritone, sings "The Last Round-Up," and the orchestra plays the march, "Sambre et Meuse." Miss Manners returns with "I'll See You Again," and the orchestra and chorus close the broadcast with "Beyond the Blue Horizon."

BUTCHER BOY DEBUTS

A characterization as grisly and gruesome as anything displayed in the "Inner Sanctum" gallery of gore will be presented Saturday, when "The Butcher Boy" makes his blood-curdling debut.

ILKA CHASE GUEST

Lovely Ilka Chase, ultra-sophisticate of Broadway and Hollywood, will bring her celebrated gifts of charm and ready repartee to the Barry Wood-Patsy Kelly Show Saturday. Miss Chase fulfills this engagement scheduled some time ago but cancelled because of the star's illness. Barry Wood and the Million Dollar Band have readied some exquisite chansonettes for their chi-chi guest while Patsy Kelly is preparing at last to discover why the other half lives.

'OPRY' CROWED OUT

"Grand Ole Opry" won't be heard Saturday at 10:30 p. m., e. w. t. In its place listeners will hear the formal acceptance address by Gov. John W. Bricker, Republican vice-president nominee, speaking from French Lick Springs, Indiana. However, "Grand Ole Opry," with Roy Acuff and the rest of the gang, will be back in its accustomed spot the following Saturday.

BRIEF RADIO NOTES

Mona Paulee, glamorous young mezzo-soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, who has been frequent soloist on network musical programs this Summer, will do two television screenings in the title role of "Carmen," September 14 and 28.

The serviceman Hildegarde interviewed on her program last week was Pfc. Raymond Still. He revealed that his wife's name was Mary B. Still, "but don't let it fool you—she talks plenty!"

Shep Fields' four year old daughter, Jo Ann, keeps after her mother to phone the disc jockeys and get them to play her daddy's records. "She's the best salesman I've got!" Shep insists.

Guy Lombardo, maestro for "Musical Autographs," is making it a policy to record old favorites, in addition to new tunes, for Decca. His latest disc release is the oldie, "Together," backed by a new tune, "Come With Me, My Honey," written by the composers of "Love, Love, Love," which was introduced by Guy.

Mark Warnow, maestro of the Hit Parade, Dangerously Yours and the Ed Wynn show, also is a stage producer. His latest production was the musical, "What's Up?" He is now looking over scripts for several plays, planning to prodce a serious drama in the near future.

One significant factor in the fan mail of Dick Brown, new singer featured Sundays is that he is receiving just as many letters from older people as from the bobby socks brigade. Brown looks like the singing discovery of 1944.

Paul Lavalle is as famous as a clarinetist as he is a musical director. He has played his instrument on every program he has directed—with one exception—and that is the Stradivari Orchestra, heard Sundays. This is an all-string ensemble, so Lavalle limits himself to wielding the baton.

DEFENDS REVIVALS

CHICAGO — The old-fashioned revival—which brings religion to the individual—is one of the strengths of Christianity in the opinion of Dr. Williams W. Sweet of the University of Chicago. Without revivalism religion will decline. Dr. Sweet told 200 ministers and educators attending the 12th annual Pastor's Institute.

Having encountered the irresistible Patton the Nazis' Jig appears up unless they can unearth that the ortical immovable object.
